The board of directors meets upon invitation by the chairman or by the director appointed by the latter, as often as the interests of the company so require, and each time at least two directors so request.

The meetings are held in the registered office of the company or in any other place indicated by the board.

In extraordinary circumstances, when required by urgent necessity and by the interest of the company, the decisions of the board of directors may be reached by unanimous written consent of all the directors. This procedure can however not be used for ascertaining the annual accounts.

Article 21.

On items not appearing on the agenda, the board can only validly deliberate and resolve when all the directors are present at the meeting and all have agreed thereto.

This agreement is assumed to have been given, when no objection is recorded in the minutes.

Resolutions of the board of directors are adopted with the majority of the votes present.

In the event of a tie vote, the chairman has a deciding vote

The absent directors can cast their vote by letter, telegram, telex or any other means of communication carried by a printed document.

Whenever they use this right the chairman of the board may sign in their name the minutes of the meeting mentioned hereinafter.

Each director prevented to attend, may instruct one of his colleagues by simple letter or even any other means of communication whereby the proxy is established in a printed document, to represent him and to vote in his place.

His statement as well as the motivation of this conflict of interest have to be recorded in the minutes of the management committee that has to decide on the matter.

A transcript of these minutes has to be presented to the next meeting of the board of directors. These entire minutes have to be taken over in the board's annual report.

When several members of the management committee are in this circumstance, and the legislation in force prohibits them from participating in the deliberations and votes on this matter, the resolution can validly be adopted by the remaining members of the management committee, even if in this circumstance no longer more than half of the members of the management committee is present or represented.
